Birchall to Hang.

The greatest criminal trial in the history of Canada came to an end a few minutes before twelve o'clock, inst night, at Woodstock, Oat. The jury in the Birchall case, after being out two hours, returned a verdict of guilty. Birchall paled perceptibly when the fateful words of his lordship were pronounced sentencing him to death by hanging on November 14, but he soon rallied, and left the court-room with a firm step and the same unfaltering look in his eyes that hee all along stamped him as one of iron nerve. Mrs. Birchall was not present during the closing scene, having retired for the night atterly fatigued from the proceedings of the day. The promptness with which the jury reached their verdict was quite a curprise to the prisoner's friends, many of whom felt convinced that Mr. Blackstock's powerful plea in the prisoner's tehalf must have raised a reasonable doubt of his guilt in the minds of the jury.

Preliminary to the speeches yesterday some evidence was taken. James Costin, a farmer living half a mile from Princeton, said a tranger called at his house Tuesday evening, Feb. 16, and asked a night's lodging. He was refused. He said he was going to Woodstock. The witness saw the body of Benwell, and new swore that the stranger was the same man. The register of the Metropolitan Hetel, New York, was produced, showing the entry of the names "Birchall, Benwell and party," and acknowledged to be gervian.

His lordship began his charge to the jury at 7:38, and in opening, warned the jury to disables their minds of any statements they may have read, and leave their minds they may have read, and leave their minus like a blank page to receive the evidence given in court under oath. In this case there was no direct evidence of guilt, yet like many other cases it showed great deprayity. He pointed out the difference between direct and circumstantial evidence. The judge reviewed the evidence given by the witnesses for the crown and said: "The the witnesses for the crown and said? The theory of the crown is that the prisoner murdered Benwell in the swamp. He lorship, in conclusion, said the duty rested with the jury to pass upon the evidence, and theirs was a solemn one. With the punishment they have nothing to do. At 9:50 o'clock the court was cleared and the jury retired. The jury were waiting with their verdict when the judge arrived in the courtroom at 11:45. The prisoner was brought into court handcoffed, looking cale and nervous. The jury were asked if they had agreed upon a verdict: "Guilty," the forman replied. When asked CIALTY.

Leng experience has fully demonstrated that replied: "Simply, I am not guitty of mard-made Brick are the best for all purposes marder."

The judge then said: "I fully concur with the verdict of the jury," and proceeded to pronounce the sentence, which was that Birchall be taken to the jail and between the hours of 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. on Friday, the 14 h day of November, be hanged by the neck until dead. The crime is one of the most remarkable on record. The dead body of F. C. Benwell was found in a desolate spot near Princeton, Ontario, not far from Niagara Faile, in February last. Death had been caused by two pietol shots fired into his head from benind. Birchall is twenty-five years of age, and was born in Church, Lancashire, Engchall, who was for years rector of Church Kirk and rural dean of Whalley, and who died in 1878. Reginald was educated at Harrow and Oxford, where he mingled with the "ast set," spending money beyond his means. In the summer of 1888 he arrived with his wife at Woodstock, Ontaric, telling different stories, saying at times that they were Lord and Lady Somerset, and at other times that he was the son of Lord Somerset, and again giving the name of Birchall. They were received in the best society, he being a dashing young man and she a pretty and refined women of charming manners. He drove fast horses and drank a great deal of champagne. He announced that their purpose was to go to farming, but the purpose was never put in practice. In May, 1889, they disappeared, leaving $1 000 in debts. In the meantime he had advertised as a "university man having a farm, wishing to meet a g. atteman's son to live with him and learn the turners with a view to partnership; must have £500 to extend stock board, lod ing and five per continterest until partnership a arranged; bighest references." He had many acswers to this advertisement, out the only ones with whom he had builness were Douglas Ra: mond Pelly, of E-sex, England, and Frederick C Benwell, son of Lieutevant-Colone: Benwell, of Isenlidene, Cheltenham, England. Birchall went to see both the Pelly and Benwell families. He impressed all those he met with his candor and business responsibility. The two young men, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Birch all, sailed for the estensible farm in Canada, arriving at New York Filday, February 14. They went to Buffalo on Sunday following, and on Tuesday, February 18, they went to Clifton. Out, just across the Suspension bridge. They lenged arout for a week. Finally, on F bruary 26, Breball went to Pelly with a paper in his hand containing an

the Stafford House at Buffalo saying that

Benweil had gone to New York and desired that all his luggage be sent to the Fifth Avenue Hotel there. Pelly posted off to New York to see if Benwell was there, and re-turned without finding him. Birchall visited Princeton, identified Benwell and was arrested. Mrs Birchail was arrested a day or so after her husband, but was discharged.

After Birchall's arrest came the weiding of After Birchall's errest came the weiding of the chain of circumstantial evidence connecting him with the murder. First Pelly told his story of Birchall's continual lies and deeplions since leaving England. This was corresponded by scores of persons who had conversations with Birchall.
